

Map your habit engine

Build a system of connected behaviors that drive real goals

01 | AUDIT YOUR CURRENT HABITS

List 5–7 habits you practice regularly. For each, mark whether it's Foundation (sleep, movement, nutrition), Work (deep focus, iteration), or Reflection (journaling, review). Is this habit isolated — or does it connect to another on your list?

HABIT	TYPE	F · W · R	CONNECTED TO?

02 | FIND YOUR MOMENTUM POINTS

Pick one Work habit you care about. Trace backward: which Foundation habit creates the conditions for it? Trace forward: how could its output feed a Reflection habit? Write one specific momentum connection.

E.G. Morning meditation → sharper thinking during deep work → clarity in evening review

03 | SPOT YOUR DISCIPLINE DRAINS

Which 2–3 habits feel like pure willpower to maintain? For each ask: Is this connected to something I deeply care about? What would need to change for this to feel like it makes sense instead of feels forced? Where is discipline covering for poor architecture?

04 | DESIGN YOUR FEEDBACK LOOP

Pick one goal. What Reflection habit will show you if your Foundation and Work habits are actually supporting it? Not just logging minutes — but: are you clearer? Faster? More focused? Design one simple feedback loop that proves the system matters.

05 | PLAN YOUR FIRST ITERATION

Pick one habit that feels disconnected or forced. Remove it, reconnect it to something you care about, or restructure when/how you do it. What's the smallest change you can test this week? The system evolves — what's your first adjustment?